

Raid the Pantry is the new cooking-themed card game designed in New Zealand by SchilMil Games of Auckland. It is similar to rummy, because players collect sets of ingredient cards to assemble dishes and score points. However, the action is driven by a unique set of Action cards that allow players to shop for, trade, retrieve and even steal the ingredients they need.

Beautiful food photography highlights each Ingredient, Dish, and Instant Dish card. Exotic and familiar food from over a dozen countries and cuisines is featured, from Ukrainian borscht to Chinese dumplings, pizza, onion rings and our own Kiwi pavlova.

“More twists and turns than MasterChef.”

Foodies, families and more

Game play is simple enough for children, yet there are enough strategic decisions to satisfy more serious board and card game players.

“A good game to play before Sunday dinner.”

Matthew, age 11

Fun and educational

Ingredient cards feature the names of their ingredient in seven foreign languages and a fact about the food.
